When Someone You Love Needs Nursing Home Assisted Living ...

There's a difference between being 'in love' and being 'in need.' We verbally claim our love for our partner and believe to feel this emotion deeply. However, when it comes down to discerning actions, we might be shocked to realize that we only need them. I needed someone in the past, and truth be told, there was something missing in both me and in my life.

The Difference Between Wanting Someone And Needing Them ...

You don't always have to say the words "I love you" to let someone know how you feel. There are many, many ways to say it. With that in mind, here are the 5 things I believe you need to keep in mind when telling someone you love them. 1) Be Sure of Your Feelings. Here's the thing:

How to tell someone you love them (without being awkward ...

One of the things we try to teach kids is that there is a clear difference between a want and a need. Needing someone is a feeling based in fear. You fear that you can't live without them, so you need them. And remember, fear is the opposite of love. Wanting someone in your life gives them the freedom to leave, but still shows them you love them.

16 Characteristics of Real Love | HuffPost

Loving someone does not mean taking everything they have and then leaving them behind once you have had your fill. No, loving someone means that you support them, and they support you. There might be days when one of you needs more support than the other, but no one who is actually in love with you will allow your relationship to be one-sided.

Let Yourself Walk Away From A Love That Doesn't Deserve You

When someone says that they need some space, the last thing you want to do is overwhelm them with questions or press them for information. The best response is a positive one. Even if things ultimately fizzle out, your partner will be grateful that things ended on good, respectful terms.
